

PRESS KIT

Anthropology

12 Walks through the Philosopher's Garden on the Upper Danube

A philosophical and artistic project by Andreas Stefan Geiger

Press contact

Andreas Stefan Geiger

info@violonisto.de

violonisto.de

Project

The question of the human being

Anthropology - 12 Walks through the Philosopher's Garden on the Upper Danube explores the question: What is the human being? The twelve walks follow a system that leads from beneath the feet to beyond the head. They connect physical, personal, social, cultural and spiritual dimensions of human existence.

Images of the Upper Danube Valley form the concrete point of departure. Philosophical texts, questions and opportunities for further exploration lead from wonder to understanding and personal reflection. Optional music creates a resonant space that can support the thinking process on an emotional level.

Andreas Stefan Geiger presenting the Anthropology project.

Started	2019
Guiding question	What is the human being?
Didactics	Playful learning in flow
Places	Fridingen on the Danube, Mühlheim on the Danube and Meßkirch

Andreas Stefan Geiger

Philosopher and artist

Andreas Stefan Geiger is a philosopher and artist. With VIOLONISTO he is developing an art form of his own in which artistic photography, philosophical texts, design, didactics and music interact. This creates spaces in which people can wonder, ask questions and continue thinking independently.

Short biography

Born	in Tuttlingen, Germany
Education	Immanuel-Kant-Gymnasium, Tuttlingen; voluntary social year at Lebenshilfe Nürnberg; studies in philosophy with an introduction to theology at the Munich School of Philosophy; Magister Artium
Academic focus	Anthropological psychology, the history of ancient philosophy and philosophy of language
Further experience	Education and counselling, psychodrama, rhetoric, presentation, body language, course didactics and systemic counselling
Master's thesis	Security and Curiosity: Anthropological and Attachment-Theoretical Reflections on Adult Learning Motivation
VIOLONISTO	Since 2019; developed as an independent art form since 2021
Current work	Freelance philosopher and artist in Fridingen on the Danube since October 2025

VIOLONISTO combines images, texts and design with playful learning in flow and music. Knowledge, personal experience and resonance each have their own place.

Products

The project is accessible in several forms.

Images and image-text posters	Artistic works in museum quality; the images carry the twelve themes of the project.
Calendar	Philosophical Danube Highlands Calendar (2020).
Maxi	Large-format quality book: the first book edition of Anthropology (2022).
Mini	Second, revised edition as a compact paperback in German and English (2026); also available as an e-book.
Midi	The project app is in preparation.
Postcards	Postcards featuring images from the project are available individually.

Book editions

The publications explore the twelve themes in different forms, from the large-format art book to the compact paperback edition. They give readers space to pursue the question of the human being at their own pace.

Formats

The project materials are adapted for different places, groups and contexts.

Exhibitions	Image-text works at distinctive venues: Art in the Castle in Fridingen, Art in the Choir in Mühlheim and Art in the Seminar Room at Meßkirch Castle.
Readings and book presentations	Selected chapters, images, conversation and music provide access to the book.
Lectures and conversations	Philosophical anthropology in clear language, with questions and space for personal perspectives.
Philosophy with children	Age-appropriate questions connect with children's lives and open a playful space for thought.
Philosophical walks	The theme is explored while walking through a series of locations in the Upper Danube Valley.

Andreas Stefan Geiger in the radio studio during an interview about Anthropology.

Copy for announcements

Short announcement

What is the human being? With his project Anthropology - 12 Walks through the Philosopher's Garden on the Upper Danube, Andreas Stefan Geiger invites audiences on a philosophical journey of discovery. Images, texts and questions lead through twelve stages from beneath the feet to beyond the head. The event creates space for wonder, conversation and personal exploration.

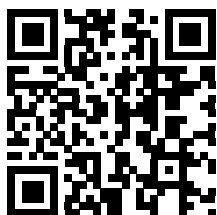

Extended announcement

The question of the human being has accompanied philosophy from its beginnings. In his Anthropology project, Andreas Stefan Geiger explores it through images of the Upper Danube Valley, philosophical texts and a didactics of playful learning in flow. The twelve walks follow a clear system: they lead from beneath the feet to beyond the head and connect physical, personal, social, cultural and spiritual dimensions. Depending on the format, this becomes an exhibition, a reading, a lecture, a conversation or a philosophical walk.

These texts may be used for editorial announcements and adapted to the relevant occasion.

Further information

At violonisto.de you will find projects, products, formats, dates and the complete press review.

violonisto.de

Press contact

Andreas Stefan Geiger
info@violonisto.de
Fridingen on the Danube, Germany

Images for editorial coverage and additional captions are available on request.